

Benson Honig (Ph.D. Stanford University) is the Teresa Cascioli Chair in Entrepreneurial Leadership and Professor at the DeGroot School of Business, McMaster University, Canada. Studying entrepreneurship worldwide, his research interests include business planning, nascent entrepreneurship, transnational entrepreneurship, social entrepreneurship, social capital, and entrepreneurship in environments of transition. He has published over 25 peer reviewed articles, including those in the Academy of Management Learning and Education, Journal of Business Venturing, Journal of Management, Entrepreneurship, Theory and Practice, Entrepreneurship and Regional Development, the ILO, and others. He serves on five editorial boards, including JBV and ET&P. He lives in Dundas with his wife Dena and two children, Alon and Shanee. He states: “I love what I do – I must be one of the luckiest people on earth!”.